That this House declines to give a Second Reading to the Police, Crime, Sentencing and Courts Bill because it contains a number of measures that, taken together, constitute a significant reduction in established civil liberties, because the Bill enables restrictions placed on freedom of assembly and association in contravention to Article 11 of the European Convention on Human Rights which, under the Human Rights Act 1998, protects the right to take part in marches, protests and demonstrations, because the Bill fails to address the racial bias and discrimination that persists within policing and the over-representation of Black, Asian and Minority Ethnic communities in the prison population and deaths in custody, because the Bill contains new measures such as the new offence of residing on land without consent in or with a vehicle that will disproportionately impact Gypsy, Roma and Traveller communities, because the Bill does not include any specific measures to prevent male violence against women and girls nor to address the fact that a large proportion of women in prisons are survivors of domestic abuse and other types of gendered violence, because the Bill therefore risks exacerbating the racial and gendered disparities in the criminal justice system by increasing police powers and sentencing whilst reducing accountability.

Keir Starmer

Angela Rayner

Anneliese Dodds

Mr David Lammy

Nick Thomas-Symonds

Mr Nicholas Brown

That this House declines to give a Second Reading to the Police, Crime, Sentencing and Courts Bill, notwithstanding the need for a police covenant and for tougher sentences for serious crimes, including child murder, terrorism and dangerous driving, and for assaults on emergency service workers, because the Bill rushes changes to protest law and fails to introduce a single new measure specifically designed to tackle the epidemic of violence against women and is therefore an abusers' charter since domestic abuse rates have spiked and victims of rape are facing the lowest prosecution rates on record, and because the Bill fails to criminalise street harassment, fails to make misogyny a hate crime, fails to raise minimum sentences for rape or stalking, and fails to give whole life orders to those found guilty of abduction and sexual assault and murder of a stranger.

Ed Davey

Daisy Cooper

Mr Alistair Carmichael

Wendy Chamberlain

Wera Hobhouse

Tim Farron

Layla Moran

Christine Jardine

Sarah Olney

Jamie Stone

Munira Wilson

Stephen Farry

That this House, while recognising the need to prevent serious violence, to improve the investigation and prosecution of crimes and the rehabilitation of people who commit them and to tackle the crisis in the courts system, declines to give a Second Reading to the Police, Crime, Sentencing and Courts Bill because it contains unjustified and draconian restrictions on the right to peaceful assembly and protest, lengthens prison sentences without any evidence that doing so will deter people from crime or help to improve public safety, fails to address the inadequate criminal justice response to sexual assault and violence against women and girls, and fails to tackle racial injustice, including the disproportionate use of police powers against Black and other ethnic minority communities.

Liz Saville Roberts

Hywel Williams

Ben Lake

That this House declines to give a Second Reading to the Police, Crime, Sentencing and Courts Bill, notwithstanding the need to introduce rehabilitative and preventative measures, expand fair participation within courts and implement further protections for emergency workers and road users, because the Bill's harsher approach to sentencing is likely to exacerbate the existing inequalities in the criminal justice system, because the Bill does not introduce any interventions designed specifically to address the issue of male violence against women and girls, because the Bill undermines people's rights to freedom of expression and peaceful assembly by providing disproportionate powers to restrict public protest, because the Bill will put pressure on Welsh services and further complicate the interaction between devolved and non-devolved policies, because the Bill's restrictions on encampments will disproportionately target Gypsy, Roma and Traveller communities, because the Bill's stop and search measures will disproportionately target black people and because, in failing to devolve powers over justice to Wales, the Bill undermines the Welsh Government's ability to achieve a joined-up approach that properly integrates justice with health, education and social policy.

The call list for Members participating is available on the House of Commons business papers pages.

3. POLICE, CRIME, SENTENCING AND COURTS BILL: PROGRAMME

(1) any expenditure incurred under or by virtue of the Act by a Minister of the Crown, government department or other public authority, and

No debate (Standing Order No. 80A\(1\)\(a\))

Secretary Priti Patel

Notes:
