7 Backbench Business

(1) Self-disconnection of prepayment meters

Resolved, That this House recognises that prepayment meter customers, who pay for their usage in advance, are not afforded the same rights when in energy debt as customers who pay in arrears, such as those who pay in direct debit; understands that a prepayment meter customer is automatically disconnected when they exceed just £10 of debt; acknowledges that, in contrast, those who pay in arrears are afforded time and support to resolve their debts before action is taken to disconnect; is deeply concerned that so called self-disconnection of prepayment meter customers will see the most vulnerable in our society left without heat, light and facilities to cook and wash over the coming winter; and strongly urges the Government to outlaw self-disconnection to ensure that the poorest and most vulnerable customers are not left without basic energy provision.—(Anne McLaughlin.)

(2) Rail transport services for communities served by the West Coast Main Line

Resolved, That this House has considered rail transport services for communities served by the West Coast Main Line.—(Virginia Crosbie.)
